Superbonus, the Ligurian builders: “Now the responsibility for any failures lies solely with the banks”

Genoa – “On the building Superbonus, the amendments on the subject of solidarity in the event of a sale are clear and do not lend themselves to doubts. Now the ball passes into the field of banks and credit institutions: further slowdowns, denials in the procedures for the assignment of loans will cause very serious consequences on the economic fabric and businesses. And in that case the responsibility will be theirs alone”.

Emanuele Ferraloro, president of Ance Liguria, intervenes directly after the vote on the amendments regarding the assignment of tax credits, generated by facilitated building interventions, which have, among other things, drastically reduced the area of the so-called joint and several liability in case of uses contrary to the law of the incentive measures provided for in the Superbonus of 110%.

“The immediate reply of the ABI that requested a clarifying intervention by the Revenue Agency on the theme” willful misconduct and gross negligence “- adds Ferraloro – is a very bad signal: if the banks today think of disregarding the commitments undertaken by the Parliament, entrenching after delaying requests for further explanation, they know immediately that they will assume the specific responsibility for business failures, job losses and damage to their own account holders “.

“It is perhaps appropriate to remind the banks – concludes the president of Ance Liguria – that the task of financial institutions is not that summarized in a memorable clip of the film Mary Poppins, that is to keep the money, make it profitable and not operate for the growth of the territory, businesses and people. And the Superbonus risks becoming a very slippery test bed for the credit world ”.
