Superbonus: Ance Liguria, legal certainty trampled – Liguria

President Ferraloro: “How will the new government be regulated?”

(ANSA) – GENOA, AUGUST 24 – “How will the new Government regulate itself given that the positions of the parties in contention, far from expressing legal certainty, range from the total cancellation of the benefits to the maximization of the benefits deriving from them also in terms of revenue for the state? “. Emanuele Ferraloro, president of Ance Liguria, raises the alarm in relation to the Superbonus 110% which has given important help for the restart of construction also in Liguria but whose future remains shrouded in mystery. “As companies in the construction sector we cannot help but point out how our country, once referred to as the cradle of law, is unable to assert legal certainty on measures that have produced a win win picture, or rather a added value for citizens, businesses, communities and the Treasury “.

And Ferraloro underlines another aspect: “It is unsustainable for the Public Administration to assume the right to renegotiate the law on the field through its various operational enactments, depriving businesses and citizens of the main guarantee: that certainty of the law that precisely with the Superbonus 110 % risks being sensationally trampled on and assuming the characteristics of an optional in electoral programs “.
